SPEAKERS

DR. JAMES H. BARROW, JR., professor and director of Hiram College Field Station, Hiram, Ohio since 1967. His interest in bird behavior has led to numerous studies in Europe, India and Columbia. His studies include the ecological influence on host-parasite relationships in cold-blooded animals and behavioral influence on the host-parasite relationship of hosts infected with blood parasites.

DR. DONALD A. HAMMER is senior wetlands ecologist with the Division of Land and Forest Resources of the Tennessee Valley Authority, Norris, TN. His work includes the release of captive reared Canada Geese to establish resident breeding populations in the Tennessee Valley; the restoration of Golden and Bald Eagle populations; and the development of artificial substrates to replace dying cypress trees for great blue herons and platforms for osprey nests.
